

Angela Jardine

I am the inaugural and current Chair of the Education Workforce Council, and alongside co-members and officers successfully steered the Council through its reconfiguration from its predecessor, the GTCW.

I completed my PGCE at University of Wales College, Cardiff and have maintained links there in my role as member of the University Court at Cardiff University. I have over thirty years' experience teaching at city schools in Cardiff, and have also been National Executive member and lay officer for the NEU (formerly NUT).

I am a strong advocate for a coherent education system predicated on the principles of excellent Early Years practice, facilitated by strong moral leadership that offers real life quality learning opportunities.

My responsibilities as Chair of Council have included promoting professional awareness and working with practitioners, the Welsh Government and other stakeholders across Wales to promote and develop the status of the professions of the education workforce, and to call for quality professional learning opportunities for all involved in educating the children and young people of Wales.
